CEO TURBO · RESTAURANT LANE

Restaurant Sales Playbook

Your daily routine from 8am to 9pm to land restaurant and coffee shop clients, sell a review card for every table, and turn setups into monthly income. Run it every day unless the ads are filling your calendar.

15–20	30–40	30–50	4–6
doors walked / selling day	calls / selling day	cold emails / day	owner conversations / day

The whole plan in one line: call in the morning, walk in the afternoon, follow up at night. Every restaurant gets the same sequence of touches until it buys or says no.

1. Is restaurants the right lane? Yes.

- Big market: roughly 1 million restaurant locations in the US and about 19,000 in Georgia (National Restaurant Association estimates). You will not run out of doors.
- You can reach them: they're in a building all day. You can walk into 15–20 in one afternoon.
- Bigger card orders: a barber needs 1 card. A restaurant needs one per table, so 5–10+ per sale.
- Repeat work: menu changes, price updates, specials and DoorDash upkeep can become a monthly fee.
- Real proof: Exclusive Restaurant & Lounge in Covington, GA: TV menus plus review cards.

The money math (honest)

Goal	What it takes
Rent and stability, $5–10k/month	10–20 deals at about $500, or table-card sales plus a few monthly clients. Doable solo.
$1M/year (about $83k/month)	About 250 restaurants paying about $333/month to keep menus, DoorDash and Maps updated, plus setup fees. That's about 1.3% of Georgia's restaurants. Needs installers and salespeople, not just you.

The path: sell setups now, turn them into monthly management, then hire.

2. Your offers

Offer	Price	When to use it

Table cards: a review card on every table, programmed on the spot	About $16/table (10 tables ≈ $160)	Easiest yes. Carry cards in the car and get paid the same day.
Restaurant Starter: menu designed and put on their TVs, plus cards for every table	Pick one price you can say confidently, e.g. $497. Take 50% today.	Restaurants with TVs, paper menus or chalkboards.
Delivery setup: DoorDash, Uber Eats, Grubhub (new or fixed)	Quote on the call	Second sale, once they trust you.
Monthly care: menu, price and hours updates on TVs, apps and Maps	e.g. $200–$400/month	Every finished client. This is the path to a million.

Link for everything: https://www.ceoturbo.com/restaurants (the table-card calculator is at /restaurants#tables).

Rule: no mass cold texts. Texting people who never agreed to it gets your Twilio number blocked by carriers and risks TCPA fines of $500–$1,500 per text. It also breaks the "opt-in only" A2P campaign you just registered. Instead, earn the text: on the call or at the door, ask "Can I text you a photo of the menu I did?" A yes is permission. Write it down, then text.

3. Your daily schedule, 8am–9pm

For selling days, Tuesday to Thursday. Restaurants are slammed 11am–2pm and 5–8pm, so you sell around those windows.

Time	What you do	Target
8:00–8:30	Get up, coffee, check yesterday's scorecard. Confirm any stop-bys you booked.	Know today's 4 numbers
8:30–9:15	Send cold emails (Email 1 to new places, Emails 2 and 3 to older ones). Owners read email early.	30–50 emails
9:15–9:30	Open today's route list (built last night). Load the car: cards, flyers, card reader, charger.	Ready to dial
9:30–10:45	Calls to every place on today's route while kitchens prep. Goal: owner's name, when they're in, a stop-by time, permission to text.	30–40 calls
10:45–11:15	Permission texts to everyone who said yes. Put today's stop-by times on your route.	All yeses texted
11:15–1:00	Lunch rush, so don't walk in. Post today's short around 12. Reply to texts, emails and DMs. Program any cards you sold. Eat. Drive to the route.	1 short posted
1:00–2:30	Coffee shops on the route (they're quiet after lunch), plus any restaurant that said "come early."	5 doors
2:30–5:00	Restaurant walk-ins. Booked stop-bys first, then cold doors on the same street.	15 doors
5:00–6:00	Dinner rush starts. Park and do follow-ups: "nice meeting you" texts (permission only) and emails, quotes, Instagram DMs.	Every visit followed up
6:00–7:00	Eat, drive home.	Rest
7:00–8:00	Build tomorrow's route: one town or corridor, 25 places. Find owner names (signed Google review replies, Instagram bio, website, Georgia Secretary of State business search).	25 places
8:00–8:45	Edit and schedule tomorrow's short. Reply to DMs.	1 short ready
8:45–9:00	Fill in the scorecard (section 9). Set tomorrow's first call.	Done for the day

The week

Day	Focus
Monday	Desk day (many restaurants are closed). Build 100 places for the week, batch emails, film 3–4 shorts, call past clients for referrals and card orders.
Tue–Thu	Selling days: full schedule above.
Friday	Installs, second visits, card drop-offs. Morning calls only, no cold walk-ins (they're busy).
Saturday	Installs and filming at clients' places. Ask every client for a 20-second video.
Sunday	Off. One long video if you have energy. Burnout won't pay rent.

Car kit

- 20+ review cards (sell and program on the spot) and a phone with the NFC writing app
- Card reader or payment link (Square, Stripe or Cash App), with your phone charged and a charger in the car
- One-page flyers with a QR code to /restaurants and your number
- Exclusive menu photos and the install video saved on your phone (works offline)

4. The follow-up sequence: every restaurant, same touches

When	Touch	Goal
Day 1, morning	Call	Owner's name, when they're in, a stop-by time, permission to text
Day 1, afternoon	Walk in	Demo on your phone. Close, or book a return visit.
Day 1, evening	Text (permission only) + Email 1	Exclusive photo plus link
Day 3	Instagram DM to their shop page	Stay in front of them
Day 5	Email 2	The review-card angle
Day 7	Second visit, when the owner is in	Close
Day 14	Email 3 (the "breakup")	Last nudge, which often gets replies

Most deals take 2–3 visits. Staff start recognizing you and put in a word with the owner.

5. Scripts

Cold call (9:30–10:45)

> "Hey, quick question. Who handles your menu boards and your DoorDash?"
> → "Got it, and when is [he/she] usually in?"
> → "Perfect. I'm Christopher with CEO Turbo. I just put the TV menus up at Exclusive Restaurant & Lounge in Covington. I'll be on your side of town today. Can I swing by at 3 for two minutes to show [name]?"
> → "And can I text you a photo of the Exclusive menu so [name] knows who I am?" ← this is your permission to text. Write down the yes.

The goal of the call is the stop-by, not the sale. Keep it under 60 seconds.

Permission text (only after they said yes)

> Hey [name], it's Christopher from CEO Turbo, like I mentioned. Here's the menu I put on Exclusive's TVs in Covington: [photo]
> Full breakdown: https://www.ceoturbo.com/restaurants?utm_source=sms&utm_medium=permission
> See you around 3. Reply STOP to opt out.

Walk-in (about 90 seconds)

1. Use their name: "Is [name] in? I called this morning. I'm Christopher."
2. Show their own listing on your phone: "You're at 4.3 with 87 reviews. [Competitor] down the street has 4.6 and 412. When someone searches 'food near me,' they get picked first."
3. Proof: the Exclusive menu photo, then 10 seconds of the video.
4. Let them tap: hand over a card. "Tap your phone on this." Their own hands do the convincing.
5. The offer: "A card on every table. Guests tap after they eat, while they're still happy. For 10 tables it's about $160, and I'll set them all up right now. If you want the menu on your TVs too, I can do that this week."
6. The close: "Want me to set them up while I'm here?"

If the owner isn't in: leave a card and a flyer, ask "When is [name] usually in?", and come back then.

Common pushback

They say	You say
"Not interested."	"Totally fair. Can I just show you one thing? Your reviews next to [competitor]'s." (Show the phone.)
"Send me info."	"Sure. Can I text you the photo? And I'm around Thursday at 3. Can I stop by for two minutes then?"
"Too expensive."	"It's about $16 a table, once. One extra table a week pays for it."
"We already have reviews."	"You do! The card keeps them coming, and fresh reviews are what keep you high on Maps."
"Can we give a free dessert for a review?"	"No. Google bans rewards for reviews and can remove them. The card just makes asking easy."

6. Cold emails

Protect your main domain: send cold email from a second domain (e.g. ceoturbogrowth.com) so spam reports never hit ceoturbo.com. Keep it to 30–50 a day per inbox. Always include your business address and an opt-out line (CAN-SPAM).

Email 1 (Day 1)

Subject: [Restaurant name]'s Google reviews

Hi [name],

I stopped by today. I'm Christopher with CEO Turbo. I just set up the TV menus at Exclusive Restaurant & Lounge in Covington and put review cards on their tables.

Guests tap their phone on the card after they eat, and your Google review form opens. More reviews push you higher on Google Maps, where "food near me" decides who eats where.

Here's the menu we made and how it works:
https://www.ceoturbo.com/restaurants?utm_source=email&utm_medium=cold&utm_campaign=e1

Can I come by Thursday at 3 and set it up?

Christopher Robinson · CEO Turbo · (470) 502-9543
[your business address] · Reply "no thanks" and I won't email again.

Email 2 (Day 5)

Subject: the review walking out your door

[name], your guests already say "it was great!" at the table. Then they leave and forget.

A card on each table catches that review before they're out the door. For 10 tables it's about $160 total, with no monthly fee, and I program them for you.

Want me to drop them off this week?

Email 3: the breakup (Day 14)

> Subject: should I close your file?
> Hi [name], I haven't heard back, so I'll assume the timing's off. If you ever want the menus on your TVs, DoorDash cleaned up, or review cards on your tables, just reply "yes" and I'll come by.

Instagram DM (Day 3)

> Hey! Stopped by [restaurant] this week. Here's the TV menu + table review cards I set up at Exclusive in Covington 👇 [photo]
> Happy to show [owner] in person. When's a good day?

7. Content: shorts and long form

What	How often	Ideas
Shorts	1 a day, posted around 12pm or 7pm	"Walking into 15 restaurants today" · "This restaurant has 9 reviews, watch this" · a guest tapping a table card · before-and-after menus · an owner's reaction
Long form	1 a week (Sunday)	One install start to finish · "How restaurants get more Google reviews" · "Getting a restaurant on DoorDash, step by step"
Client videos	Every client	Ask for 20 seconds: "What did Christopher do for you?" Start with Exclusive.

Film during work you're already doing; don't make content a separate job. Doors and calls bring money in days. Content and ads bring it in months.

8. Why this works (the psychology)

- Reciprocity: you call first, show up in person, and set things up for them.
- Social proof: Exclusive, and then every restaurant after it.
- Loss aversion: "reviews walking out the door," and their rating next to a competitor's.
- Commitment: small yeses first: "Can I swing by?" "Can I text you the photo?" "Tap this card."
- Names and specifics: their name, their rating, their real competitor. Specifics build trust.

9. Daily scorecard

Fill this in every night at 8:45. If owner conversations are 4+ a day, closes will follow.

Day	Emails sent	Calls	Doors	Owner talks	Closes	$ collected
Mon
Tue
Wed
Thu
Fri
Sat
Week

Weekly targets: 150+ emails · 100+ calls · 45–60 doors · 12–18 owner conversations. Starting out, expect about one close every 1–3 selling days. It speeds up as you get smoother and collect more proof.

Route list (build it the night before)

✓	Restaurant	Owner name	Rating / # reviews	On DoorDash/Uber?	Paper menu?	Best time

10. This week, before anything else

1. Call every past client personally, not a mass text: review cards for their counter or trucks, a Google profile tune-up, and "Who do you know who needs this?" Warm clients close in days.
2. Go back to Exclusive: ask the owner for a 20-second video, offer DoorDash or Uber Eats setup, and ask "Who else do you know who owns a restaurant?"
3. Keep the office-transformation Meta ads paused until rent is covered.
4. Run the schedule Tuesday to Thursday and fill in the scorecard every night.

Market figures are approximate (National Restaurant Association estimates). Close rates are starting expectations, not promises. Track your own numbers and adjust.
